

All commands sent from the BeyondEncryption server to the client are encrypted. This means that the communications cannot be deciphered by a hacker, preventing a hacker from replicating and sending an unauthorised or bogus command to a client. In addition to secure communications from the server to the client, each client has a unique encryption key which is not stored on the client.

BeyondEncryption