

No, the software is running underneath Microsoft operating system, so none of the normal applications will even know that the information is being encrypted/ decrypted in the background. You can even use other file encryption products on top of the BeyondEncryption.